IT HAS A NAME · MANAGEMENT MADE SIMPLE

PILLAR 6.2 · ENGINEERING THE PREDICTABLE
EXECUTION AND PROCESS

TACTICAL MEETINGS

A tactical meeting is not accountability theater, it is a course correction.

What it solves, who joins and how to turn strategy into this week's plan.

> AND THE CONSEQUENCE
>
> If nobody changes plan, people or resources when the number drifts, it only watched the drift.

THE CASCADE

How the weekly turns into a slide parade.

WHAT YOU SEE

Each area presents its own report, from the first metric to the last...

THE MECHANISM

...time runs out during the presentations and the debate is left for the end, which never comes...

THE CONSEQUENCE

...and next week's plan comes out the same as the last one, with a bigger drift.

> A weekly that only presents numbers pushes the correction to the next crisis.

THE FORK

Is this topic for the weekly?

THE RULER

01

Does it require changing plan, deadline, people or resources in the coming weeks? It belongs in the weekly.

02

Can two people solve it today? Back to the daily.

03

Does it change where the company is going or where it invests? It goes to the strategic.

> The tactical meeting is the middle of the road. It translates what was decided above into what gets done below.

THE METHOD

The Reroute, four steps every week.

01 DASHBOARD

the numbers arrive a day ahead, and the meeting starts knowing where it stands

02 DEVIATION

only what left the plan makes the agenda, what is on track gets no time

03 ADJUSTMENT

every deviation leaves with what changes, plan, deadline, people or resources, and an owner

04 PARKING LOT

any topic bigger than the table goes to the strategic list, with a date

> The person running it is not the one who talks the most. It is the one who holds the focus and cuts the drift.

WHAT TO ASK, IN ORDER

Four questions, ninety minutes at most.

01 · DASHBOARD

Where are we against this week's plan?

dashboard sent ahead, one minute per area, no slides

02 · DEVIATION

Which numbers left the plan, and why?

only what drifted gets in, the agenda is built right there

03 · ADJUSTMENT

What changes to correct each deviation?

plan, deadline, people or resources, decided in the room, with an owner

04 · PARKING LOT

What is bigger than this table?

it goes to the strategic list with an owner and a date, it does not get solved here

TWO MODELS

Accountability theater or course correction.

THE COMMON MODEL

The slide weekly

Each area presents everything, from the first number to the last

The data shows up for the first time in the room

The debate is left for the end and the end never comes

The plan stays the same and the drift grows

THE DESIGNED MODEL

The adjustment weekly

Each area talks only about what left the plan

The data arrived ahead and was already read

Time goes to the deviation and to the fix

The plan changes, with an owner and a deadline

MISTAKE AND CONSEQUENCE

What a weekly without adjustment costs.

01 The drift becomes a trend.

→ the number that left the plan one week becomes the pattern for the quarter.

02 Strategy never comes down.

→ what leadership decided never becomes a plan, and operations keep the old way.

03 The manager becomes a relay.

→ carries numbers up and pressure down, without deciding anything in between.

> If next week starts with the same plan and a worse number, the weekly did not happen.

THE CHAIN

The same plan test.

01 Take the plan that walked into your last weekly and the plan that walked out.

↓

02 Count what changed, deadline, people, resources or priority, and who owns each change.

↓

03 If nothing changed and the number drifted, the meeting only watched the drift.

↑

WHERE LEADERSHIP STEPS IN

The same plan with the number on track is great. The same plan with a worse number is the meeting failing.

RUN IT THIS WAY NEXT TIME

Three moves for your next weekly.

STEP 01

Send the dashboard a day ahead, with the deviation flagged.

nobody reads numbers out loud, the room starts at the problem

STEP 02

Open with a one minute round per person.

the day's agenda is built from whatever deviation shows up

STEP 03

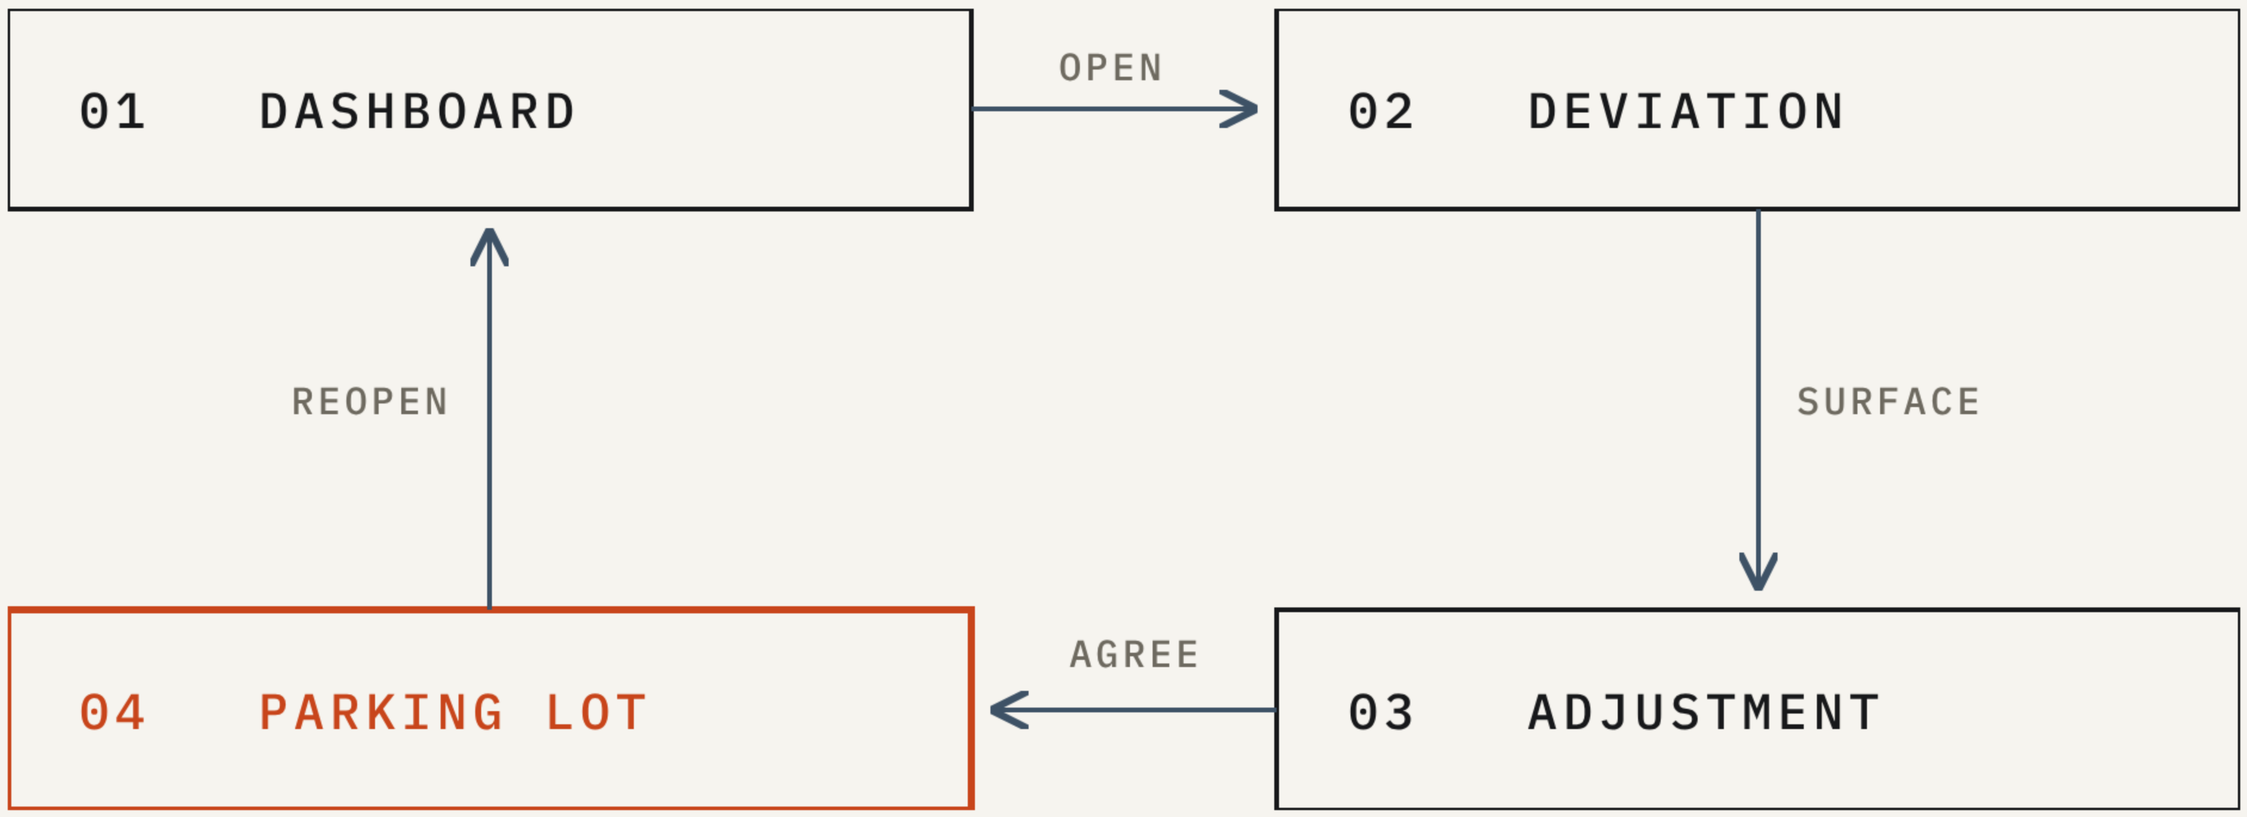

Create the parking lot list.

strategic topics leave the room with an owner and a date at the next strategic meeting

> Name who runs it. Without someone holding the focus, the tactical becomes the everything meeting.

THE MODEL THAT STICKS

The Reroute, a loop and not a list.

A good weekly is not the one that shows the number. It is the one that changes the plan when it drifts.

SAVE THIS FOR LATER

before you build the agenda for your next weekly.

FABIO GARCIA
MANAGEMENT AS ENGINEERING
/IN/FALERCIA