

HARD FEEDBACK

Hard feedback does not demotivate because of the content.

How to tell the truth without erasing the person sitting across the table from you.

AND THE CONSEQUENCE

It demotivates because of the context, the tone and the missing way out.

THE CASCADE

The problem is almost never what you say.

WHAT YOU SEE

You come in throwing stones...

THE MECHANISM

...the person closes up and defends...

THE CONSEQUENCE

...and the learning dies right there.

If the person walked out defensive, the one who failed was you, not her.

THE FORK

Before you open your mouth, answer this.

THE FILTER

01

Do I want her to change?

02

Or do I want to vent my frustration?

03

If it is the second, postpone the conversation.

Feedback given in anger corrects nothing, it just charges an emotional toll.

THE METHOD

The 4P of feedback that corrects without breaking.

01 PREP

the context you build before the conversation

02 PROOF

an observed fact and its impact, never a personality label

03 PLAN

the way out, with your support alongside

04 PRESENCE

follow up, because feedback is a process

Four steps, one short conversation, no resentment.

WHAT TO ASK, IN ORDER

What it looks like in practice.

01 • PREP

Prep.

name what she does well, with a concrete example, that is the base, not flattery

02 • PROOF

Proof.

describe the fact and the impact, “it slipped three times, and the client called me”, never “you are disorganized”

03 • PLAN

Plan.

agree on what changes, by when, and what you do to help

04 • PRESENCE

Presence.

book the revisit, and credit the first sign of progress

TWO MODELS

The brutal teacher or the tough coach.

THE COMMON MODEL

The brutal teacher

Talks harsh and calls it honesty

Labels the person

Hands over the problem and vanishes

Harvests fear and silence

THE DESIGNED MODEL

The tough coach

Talks straight, without being harsh

Describes the fact

Hands over problem and path

Harvests ownership

MISTAKE AND CONSEQUENCE

Being serious is not being harsh.

01 Direct is saying what it is.

→ harsh is saying it in a way that hurts on purpose.

02 Coldness is not neutrality.

→ the person reads contempt, not professionalism.

03 Firm with respect opens the mind.

→ aggression closes the conversation in ten seconds.

| The tone decides whether the message lands, or bounces back.

THE CHAIN

The next day test.

01

Woke up feeling defeated? You punished.

02

Woke up knowing what to do? You taught.

03

The difference is not the hardness, it is the way out you offered.

WHERE LEADERSHIP STEPS IN

The target is ownership, never blame.

RUN IT THIS WAY NEXT TIME

Run it this way next conversation.

STEP 01

One fact, one consequence, one question.

then listen, without finishing the person's sentence

STEP 02

Leave with a written plan, and the support agreed.

STEP 03

Book the revisit, and credit the first sign of progress.

Feedback is a process, not an event. Whoever yanks and vanishes only scares.

THE MODEL THAT STICKS

The 4P, a loop and not a list.

Hard feedback breaks no one. Badly given feedback does.

SAVE THIS FOR LATER
in your next hard feedback.
