

DELEGATION

Delegating does not take the result off your calendar.

How to let go of the execution without letting go of the result, and without becoming the boss who redoes everything.

AND THE CONSEQUENCE

It takes the execution out of your hands, and keeps the risk shared.

THE CASCADE

Passing the ball and vanishing is not delegating.

WHAT YOU SEE

You tell the person to jump alone...

THE MECHANISM

...you stay in the plane watching from afar...

THE CONSEQUENCE

...and then you demand a perfect landing.

Delegating is jumping together, not ordering someone to jump alone.

THE FORK

Did you delegate, or outsource?

THE YARDSTICK

01

— ☐ The result vanished from your calendar?
Outsourced.

02

— ☐ Still there, out of your hands? Delegated.

03

— ☒ If the team loses, the bill is on both.

| Accountability does not transfer, it widens.

THE METHOD

The MESH that holds the result.

01 MANDATE

what has to happen, not the step by step

02 ELBOW ROOM

how far the person decides without asking

03 SIGNAL

the metric that shows whether it is on track

04 HUDDLE

the cadence that discusses direction, not a pretty spreadsheet

Without the four, you did not delegate, you gambled.

WHAT TO ASK, IN ORDER

Settle the autonomy before, never after.

01 • MANDATE

Decide and go.

known routine, low risk, reports only at the ritual

02 • ELBOW ROOM

Decide and tell me.

impact on another team, tells me the same day

03 • SIGNAL

Check with me first.

high risk, big money, sensitive client

04 • HUDDLE

The call is mine.

irreversible, legal, people

TWO MODELS

Dumping the task or jumping together.

THE COMMON MODEL

Dumps the task

Hands over the problem and vanishes

Agrees on effort

Shows up when it goes wrong

Harvests dependence and fear

THE DESIGNED MODEL

Jumps together

Hands over result and room

Agrees on metric and date

Shows up at the agreed cadence

Harvests autonomy and trust

MISTAKE AND CONSEQUENCE

Three ways to ruin it.

01 Delegating and redoing it yourself.

- the first time you redo it, nobody takes ownership again.

02 Delegating with no metric.

- all that is left is asking how it is going, and hearing it is fine.

03 Only showing up when it goes wrong.

- that is not follow up, that is an audit.

| Charging for what was never agreed is a trap, not management.

THE CHAIN

The parachute test.

01

If it goes wrong, who picks up the bill?

02

Only the person? You dumped it.

03

Both of you? The risk is truly shared.

WHERE LEADERSHIP STEPS IN

Trust is born of shared risk, never of a speech.

RUN IT THIS WAY NEXT TIME

Run it this way on the next handoff.

STEP 01

Write the result in one sentence, with a date.

STEP 02

Agree the level of room, green, yellow, orange or red.

STEP 03

Set the metric and the date of the next huddle.

Thirty minutes of agreement save three weeks of rework.

THE MODEL THAT STICKS

The MESH, a loop and not a list.

Delegating is not letting go. It is jumping together.

SAVE THIS FOR LATER

in your next delegation.
