

CONFLICT

Conflict does not disappear on its own.

How to mediate two people on the team without becoming judge or therapist.

AND THE CONSEQUENCE

It changes shape, becomes an island, becomes gossip, and gets expensive in the deadline.

THE CASCADE

How friction turns into an island.

WHAT YOU SEE

You wait for them to sort it out...

THE MECHANISM

...each one builds an island and picks who to talk to...

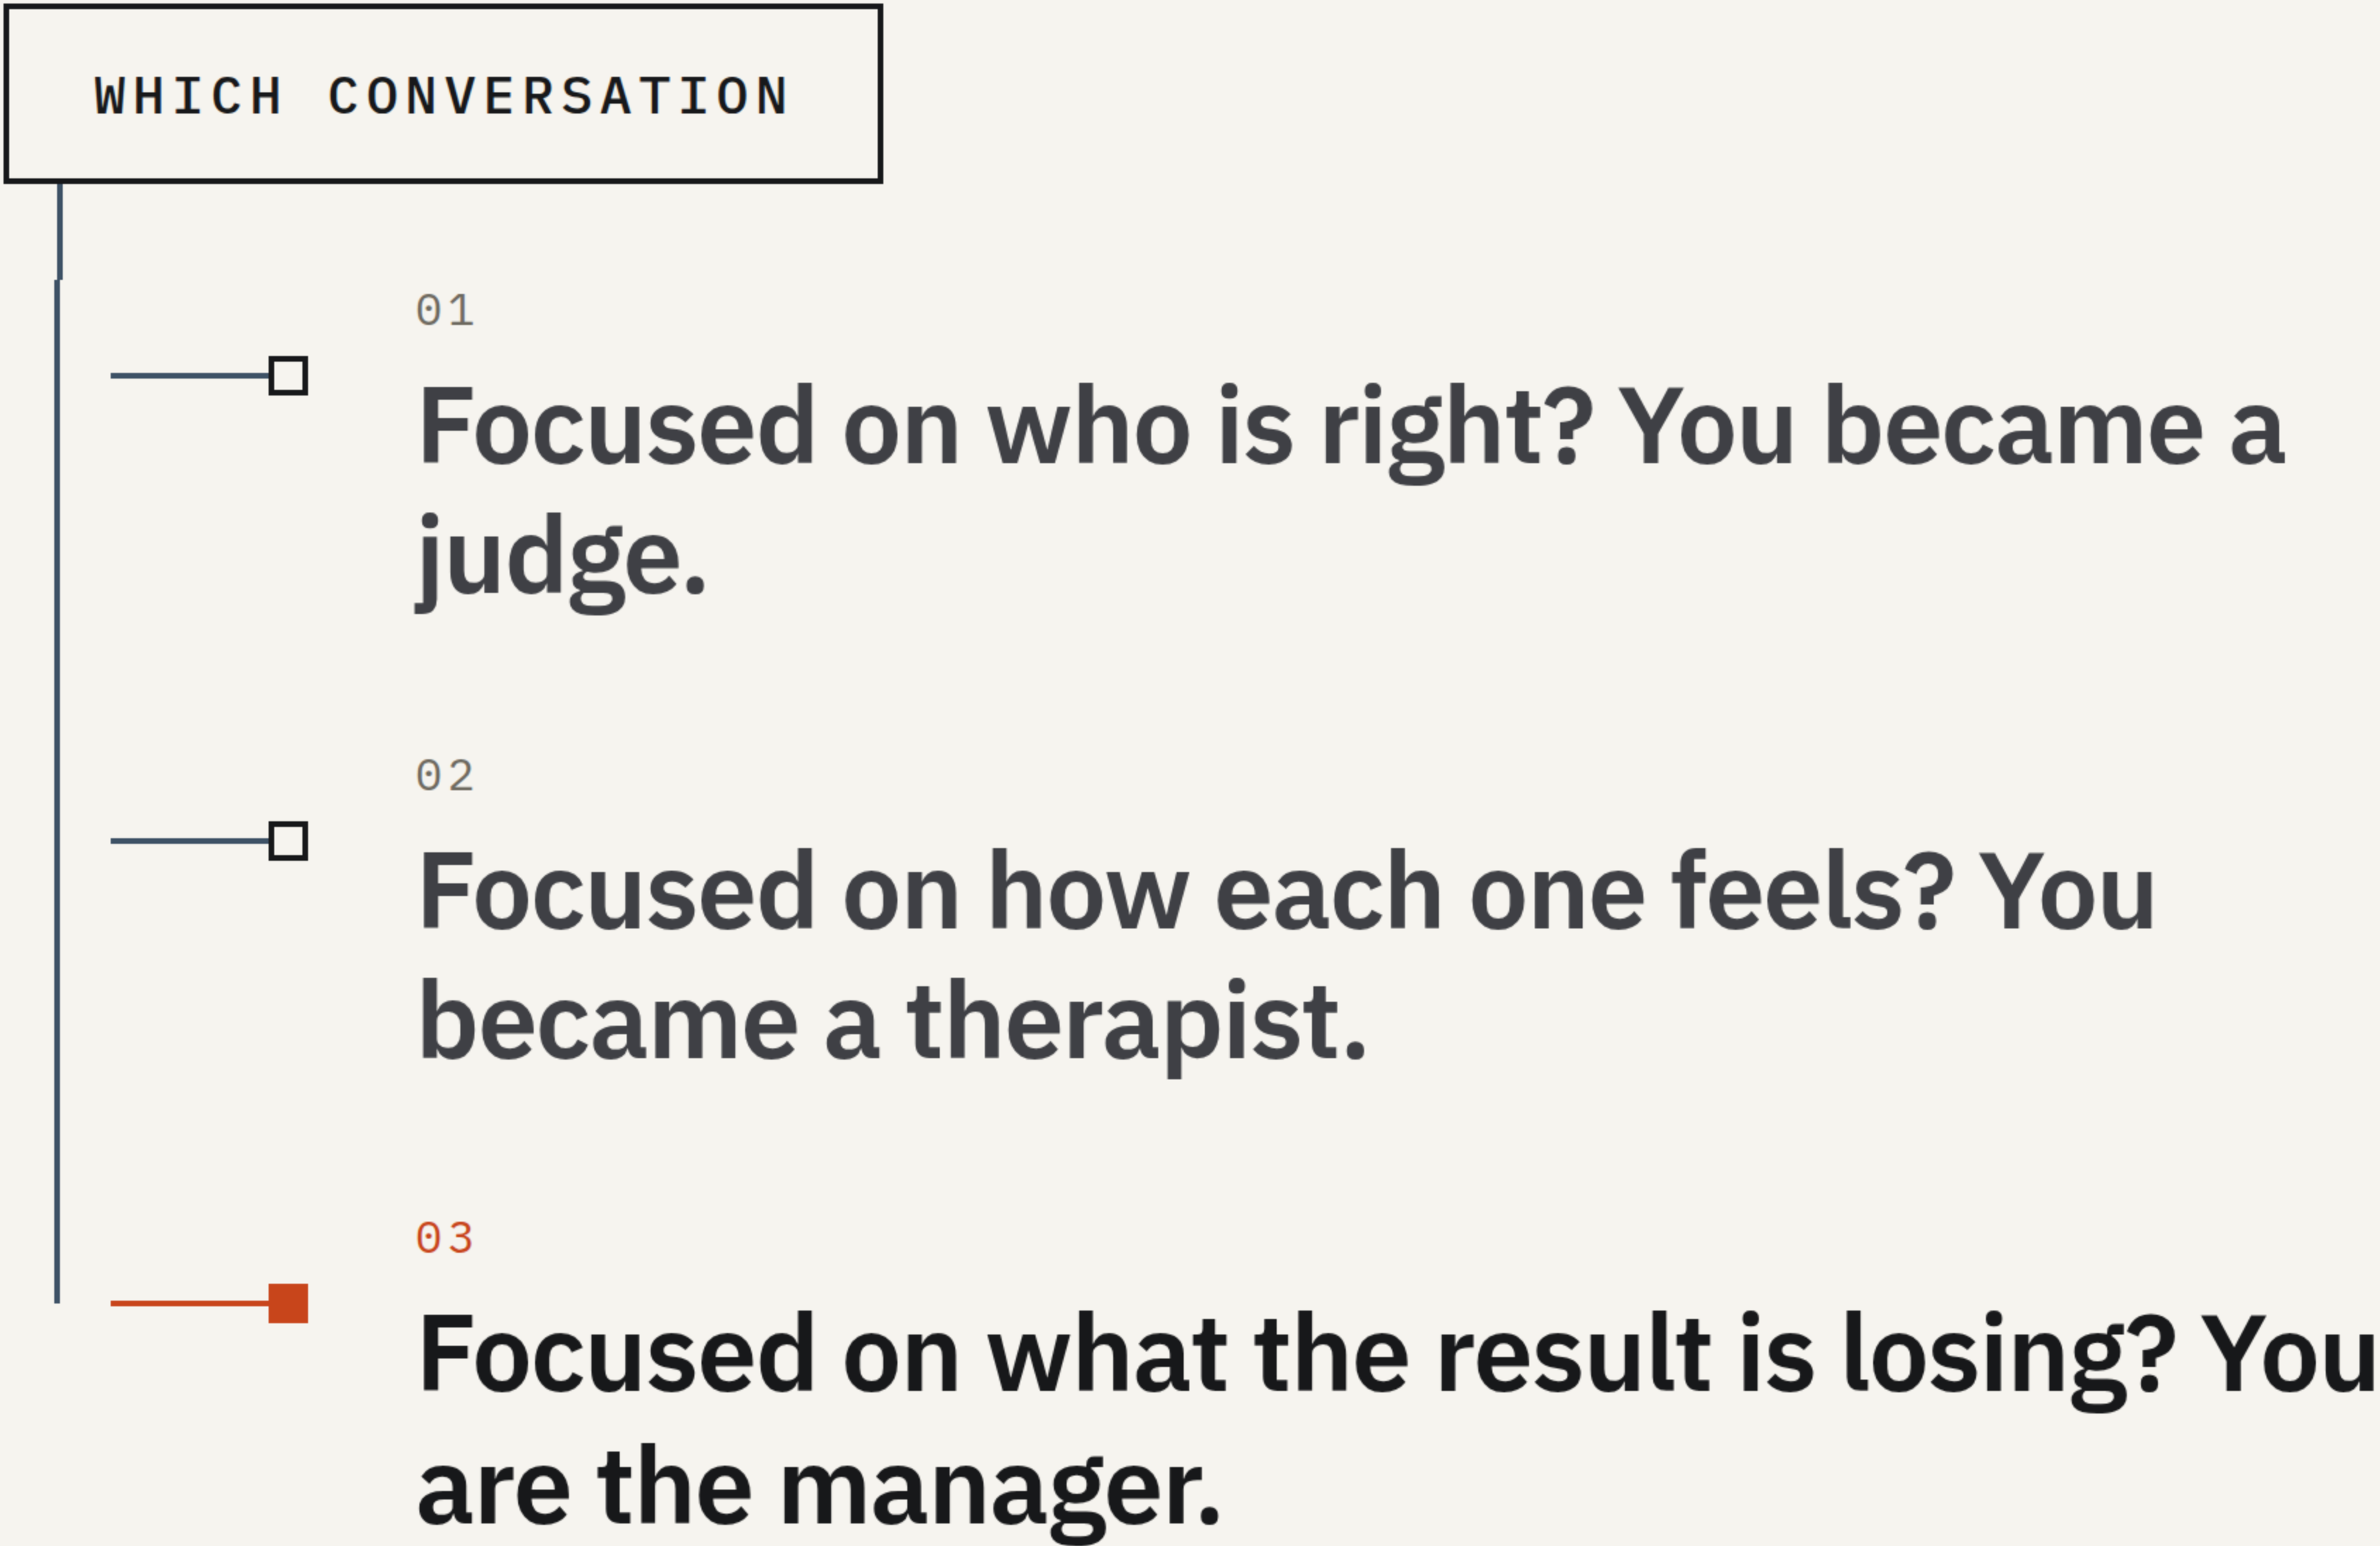

THE CONSEQUENCE

...and the work starts taking the longer route.

The cost of conflict never shows in the spreadsheet, it shows in the deadline.

THE FORK

Which conversation you are about to run.

The table is about the work. Everything else is a consequence.

THE METHOD

The Table Script, four blocks.

01 FACT

each one describes what happened, no adjectives, no intent

02 COST

what it cost in time, rework or client

03 REQUEST

what each one needs the other to do differently

04 AGREEMENT

what gets written down, and the date we review it

Forty minutes, both in the room, and nobody leaves without an agreement.

WHAT TO ASK, IN ORDER

What to say when the conversation heats up.

01 • FACT

Tell me what happened, with no adjectives.

cuts the interpretation and returns the talk to the fact

02 • COST

What did that delay last week?

brings the real cost in and takes the focus off both egos

03 • REQUEST

What do you need him to do differently?

turns a complaint into a request, the only negotiable thing

04 • AGREEMENT

Agreed, we review this in two weeks.

with no date, the deal lasts until the next bad day

TWO MODELS

Smoothing over or mediating.

THE COMMON MODEL

Smoothing over

Talks to each one separately, always

Asks for goodwill

Ends with a handshake

Comes back in three weeks

THE DESIGNED MODEL

Mediating

Puts both at the same table

Asks for fact, cost and request

Ends with a written agreement

Reviews it on the set date

MISTAKE AND CONSEQUENCE

Three mistakes that guarantee a repeat.

01 Sitting them down at peak irritation.

- nobody listens in the heat, give it a day and send an agenda.

02 Picking a winner to close it fast.

- the loser becomes a silent opponent of the agreement.

03 Discussing the case with other people on the team.

- you just taught everyone that nothing stays between us here.

| Friction that returns a third time is no longer a people problem.

THE CHAIN

The third time test.

01

The same friction comes back a third time.

02

Swap one of the people and the problem persists...

03

...then the defect is in how the work is designed,
not in them.

WHERE LEADERSHIP STEPS IN

Overlapping roles and competing goals manufacture conflict on their own.

RUN IT THIS WAY NEXT TIME

Thirty minutes to defuse the friction.

STEP 01

Invite both with a written agenda, no surprises.

what we will cover, how long, and what has to come out of it

STEP 02

Run the four blocks in order, skipping none.

fact, cost, request, agreement, and you only steer

STEP 03

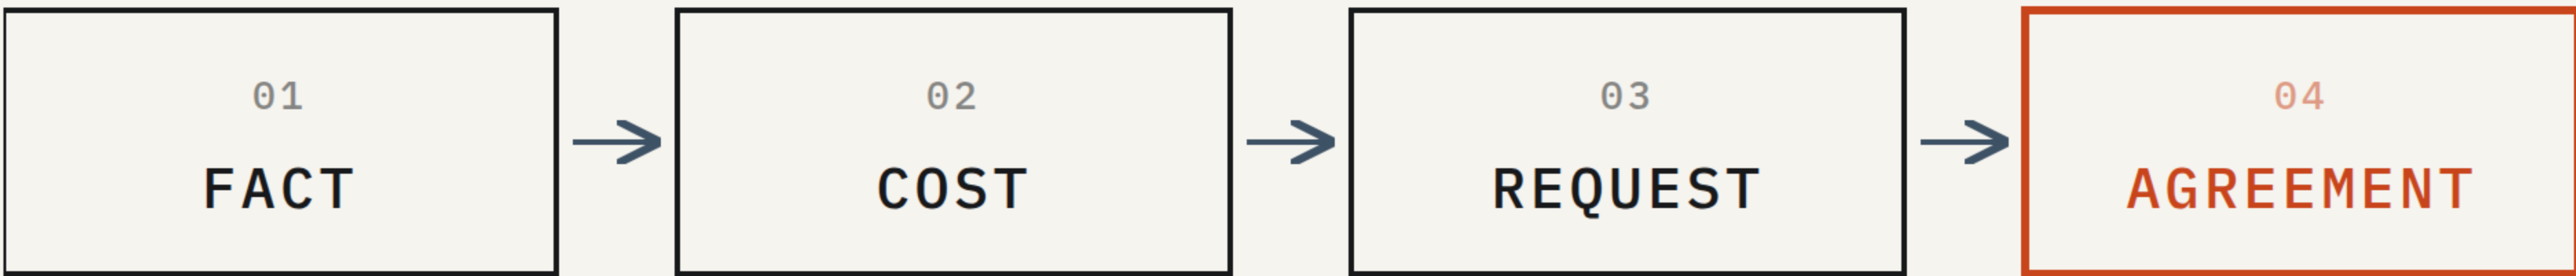

Set the review date before anyone stands up.

an agreement with no review date is only a truce

You do not have to fix the relationship. You have to restore the work.

THE MODEL THAT STICKS

The Table Script, in the order that matters.

Conflict is not smoothed over. It is steered until it becomes an agreement.

SAVE THIS FOR LATER
in the next conversation you are putting off.
