

PERFORMANCE REVIEW

A review with no evidence is an accumulated impression.

How to review performance without guesswork.

AND THE CONSEQUENCE

And an impression always finds an example that confirms it.

THE CASCADE

How an impression becomes a review.

WHAT YOU SEE

You form an impression at some point in the year...

THE MECHANISM

...you start noticing what confirms it...

THE CONSEQUENCE

...and you write it into the review as if it were a fact.

Nobody does this in bad faith. The brain hunts for confirmation on its own.

THE FORK

Test your sentence before you say it.

TEST YOUR LINE

01

Is it a label, he is disorganized? That is guesswork.

02

Does it have a date and a situation, in the last six deliveries? Fact.

03

Does it point at what changes tomorrow? Now it is a useful review.

An adjective describes your perception. A fact describes the work.

THE METHOD

The translation in three columns.

01 WHAT I THINK

write the raw impression, unfiltered, just for yourself

02 WHAT THE EVIDENCE IS

situation, date and effect, at least three occurrences

03 WHAT CHANGES

the new behavior, with a deadline and a way to measure

Whatever does not survive the second column does not enter the conversation.

IN PRACTICE, IN ORDER

The same review, rewritten.

01 • WHAT I THINK

He is not committed.

a label, indefensible, and she will disagree with good reason

02 • WHAT THE EVIDENCE IS

In the last six deliveries, three ran late with no warning.

a fact, verifiable, and it moves the talk onto the agreement

03 • WHAT CHANGES

She is difficult to work with.

a label that usually hides an unmediated conflict

04

Two teams reported decisions made without consulting them.

a fact, specific, and now there is something to agree on

TWO MODELS

Opining or reviewing.

THE COMMON MODEL

Opining

Talks about personality

Piles it all up at year end

Compares people to each other

Ends in a score and silence

THE DESIGNED MODEL

Reviewing

Talks about behavior and delivery

Records along the way

Compares against the agreement

Ends in a plan and a date

MISTAKE AND CONSEQUENCE

Three silent distortions.

01 Reviewing the whole year by the last two months.

- recent memory dominates everything when there is no record.

02 Scoring higher whoever resembles you.

- a similar style looks like competence, and almost never is.

03 Reviewing based on what you heard from others.

- without verifying, you are reviewing the gossip, not the person.

| A simple record kept through the year kills all three at once.

THE CHAIN

The no adjective sentence test.

01

Describe the person's performance with no adjective at all.

02

Nothing left to say?

03

Then what you have is an impression, not a review.

WHERE LEADERSHIP STEPS IN

Thirty seconds of testing prevent an hour of unfair conversation.

RUN IT THIS WAY NEXT TIME

How to leave guesswork behind this week.

STEP 01

Open one note per person and record facts, not scores.

three lines a month already change the review completely

STEP 02

Take the strongest impression you hold today and translate it.

if you cannot find three pieces of evidence, it does not go in

STEP 03

End every review with what changes and when we measure.

without that, it is a diagnosis with no treatment

A review is an instrument of decision, not a showcase for opinion.

THE MODEL THAT STICKS

The Three Columns, in the order that matters.

Performance with no data and no plan is guesswork with a diploma.

SAVE THIS FOR LATER
in your team's next review cycle.
