

CULTURE

Nobody learns the culture from a poster.

What it is in practice, beyond the frame on the wall.

AND THE CONSEQUENCE

They learn by watching what happened to whoever failed, disagreed or left.

THE CASCADE

How culture becomes decoration.

WHAT YOU SEE

The company writes the values and frames them on the wall...

THE MECHANISM

...but in the first crisis it does exactly the opposite...

THE CONSEQUENCE

...and the team learns from the action, never from the frame.

A value that does not survive pressure was never a value, it was an intention.

THE FORK

Three questions that reveal the real culture.

THE REAL CULTURE

01

What is genuinely celebrated here?

02

What is tolerated here with nobody saying a word?

03

What costs you dearly here if you do it?

The real culture lives in what is tolerated, not in what is said.

THE METHOD

The five moments of truth.

01 WHEN SOMEONE FAILS

a recorded lesson, or an exposed culprit

02 WHEN SOMEONE DISAGREES

a debate with a decision, or a silent black mark

03 WHEN SOMEONE ASKS FOR HELP

fast support, or a note in the review

04 WHEN SOMEONE IS PROMOTED

teaches which behavior the company buys

05 WHEN SOMEONE LEAVES

shows if people are cared for, or only the badge

Five moments a year teach more than twelve months of speeches.

IN PRACTICE, IN ORDER

The lesson the team files away.

01 • WHEN
SOMEONE FAILS

A failure punished in public.

teaches people to hide problems until they get too expensive

02 • WHEN SOMEONE
DISAGREES

Disagreement received badly.

teaches people to agree in the room and complain in the hallway

03 • WHEN
SOMEONE ASKS
FOR HELP

A promotion with no criteria.

teaches that results matter less than proximity

04 • WHEN SOMEONE IS PROMOTED

An exit with no explanation.

teaches that nobody here is irreplaceable, and everyone feels it

TWO MODELS

Poster culture or routine culture.

THE COMMON MODEL

Poster culture

Values on the wall and on the badge

An annual training about culture

The speech changes, the practice does not

Nobody can name one example

THE DESIGNED MODEL

Routine culture

Values visible in the five moments

Correction on the day it happens

The practice changes before the speech

Everyone tells the same story

MISTAKE AND CONSEQUENCE

Three inconsistencies the team never forgets.

01 Demanding from the team what leadership does not do.

- the distance between said and done becomes the real yardstick.

02 Protecting whoever delivers and wrecks the room.

- one exception like that cancels a year of speeches about respect.

03 Doing nothing when a value gets broken.

- silence from leadership is approval, and the team reads it that way.

Culture is not built by what you approve, it is defined by what you tolerate.

THE CHAIN

The three month hire test.

01

Ask someone who joined three months ago.

02

What have you already worked out that is not done here, with nobody saying it?

03

Their answer is your real culture, unfiltered.

WHERE LEADERSHIP STEPS IN

Whoever just arrived sees what people with years here stopped noticing.

RUN IT THIS WAY NEXT TIME

How to act on culture this week.

STEP 01

Take the last big failure and tell what the area learned.

in public, naming no culprit, and show what changed in the process

STEP 02

Thank out loud whoever disagreed with you.

that gesture is worth more than any values campaign

STEP 03

Ask the three month question to two new people.

write the answers down, they are usually uncomfortable and precise

Culture changes through repeated behavior, never through an announcement.

THE MODEL THAT STICKS

The Five Moments of Truth, in the order that matters.

Culture is not what is on the wall. It is what survives the pressure.

SAVE THIS FOR LATER
next time someone gets it wrong in your area.
