

NEW MANAGER

Becoming a manager is not gaining a team, it is swapping what you deliver.

What changes when you become a manager for the first time.

AND THE CONSEQUENCE

Whoever keeps delivering their own work becomes a specialist with more meetings.

THE CASCADE

The promotion that does not change the delivery.

WHAT YOU SEE

You were promoted because you did the work well.

THE MECHANISM

You keep doing it, now with half the time and twice the meetings.

THE CONSEQUENCE

The week goes by and it feels like nothing got produced.

Something did. Producing just changed its name, and nobody told you.

THE FORK

What did you take home this week?

WHAT YOU TOOK HOME

01

— ☐ Took work home to finish at night?

you are still the doer

02

— ☐ Took worry about someone else's deadline?

you became the supervisor

03

— ☒ Took a design decision to think about?

then you became a manager

A manager thinks about the system that produces the work, not the work.

THE METHOD

The Four Swaps.

01 WHAT YOU DELIVER

stops being your work and becomes the team's result

02 WHAT YOU DELEGATE

stops being a task and becomes calculated risk

03 HOW YOU HELP

stops being giving the answer and becomes asking the question

04 WHERE YOU SHOW UP

stops being the protagonist and becomes the condition

The second swap is the hardest. Delegating tasks is logistics, delegating risk is trust.

WHAT TO ASK, IN ORDER

Four questions for the end of the week.

01 • WHAT YOU
DELIVER

What did the team deliver that you never touched?

that is your result now

02 • WHAT YOU
DELEGATE

What risk did you leave in someone's hands?

and you held it without stepping in

03 • HOW YOU
HELP

How many times did you answer instead of asking?

the fast answer is the ex doer's addiction

04 • WHERE YOU
SHOW UP

What only moved because you were present?

that is design debt, not merit

TWO MODELS

The promoted specialist and the manager.

THE COMMON MODEL

Promoted specialist

Delivers their own work

Delegates tasks and chases execution

Fixes it fast to unblock

Takes pride in being sought out

THE DESIGNED MODEL

Manager

Delivers the team's result

Delegates risk and chases criteria

Asks so the other person solves it

Takes pride in not being necessary

MISTAKE AND CONSEQUENCE

Three doer habits that no longer serve.

01 Solving it because it is faster.

→ faster today and more expensive every month after.

02 Measuring the day by what you did.

→ your good day now is the day the team moved without you.

03 Avoiding conflict on the team.

→ unresolved conflict does not vanish, it just changes channel.

The first six months set the habit. After that, changing costs three times as much.

THE CHAIN

The hands test.

01

List what left your area this week.

02

Mark what went through your hands.

03

If it is almost everything, you have not become a manager yet.

WHERE LEADERSHIP STEPS IN

The right proportion is not zero. But if it is the majority, the team is an extension of you.

RUN IT THIS WAY NEXT TIME

Three moves in the first month.

STEP 01

Pick one thing you still do and hand it over.

with the risk attached, not just the execution

STEP 02

Answer the next question with a question.

what would you do, and why

STEP 03

Reserve two hours a week for design.

no agenda, no people, just the team's system

Without the design block, the urgent takes one hundred percent and the turn never happens.

THE MODEL THAT STICKS

The Four Swaps, in the order that matters.

Becoming a manager is not gaining a team.
It is swapping what you deliver.

SAVE THIS FOR LATER
next Friday, before you close the week.
